Scene 1.2: Meet Cory Richards

Cory Richards: You know, we're really, really, really, really far out there, and if anything goes wrong right now…My rope is hung and I'm afraid to put too much weight on it because the rock is so sharp. My weight is completely on it right now. But it could cut regardless, as you go up. I want to try and expand myself—always—and push boundaries of adventure and storytelling to give people a view that they might not expect. The mountains have always been a vehicle to voice myself, so I continue to go back, and I continue to push myself, and I continue to try.
