ENGLISH LANGUAGE TEACHING CATALOGUE 2020
BRINGING THE WORLD TO THE CLASSROOM AND THE CLASSROOM TO LIFE

A PART OF CENGAGE
'There remains so much to explore. We live in an incredible world. So go out. Be curious.'

Andrés Ruzo (Perspectives, Advanced)
Welcome to the National Geographic Learning
English Language Teaching Catalogue 2020

As we move into the second decade of the 21st Century we are faced with ever more uncertainty – political, environmental, economic. It’s an unknown future that we are preparing our students for and that brings challenges and opportunities to the classroom. We are in a unique position in education to build the skills in our students to help them navigate these waters. English will continue to be the main language of communication as we work as a global community to find solutions together to the issues in front of us. But we need to go beyond language to develop global citizens who understand and appreciate our differences as well as our similarities, who can innovate and problem solve and who can interact and share their ideas with clarity and confidence.

And what better resources to choose to bring those skills to the forefront, than the authentic materials from National Geographic Learning. Materials that present explorers and TED speakers as role models to follow and aspire to, and that put learners at the centre of language development.

Within these pages you will find a richness of materials that represent the whole world and bring that world into your classroom. We hope you enjoy the stunning photography, the inspiring content and we’re sure you’ll come away having learnt something about the world you might not have known before. Enjoy the journey!

There are certain key themes that have emerged in the ELT industry over the past years: the advance of digital in our classrooms and in our teaching, and the pressing need to develop the whole learner. What does this mean exactly? It means helping students become curious, rounded, well-informed global citizens to allow them to work, live and enjoy the modern world. That is the world of the 21st century, and the skills that have emerged as being critical to success within that world need to be addressed across education.

Our partnership with National Geographic Society puts us in the privileged position of being able to provide our students (and teachers) with truly global material that lends itself to developing those 21st century skills – such as critical thinking and digital and visual literacy. It also undoubtedly inspires learners to be more intellectually curious, culturally aware and responsible members of our global society. In addition, our recent and concurrent partnership with TED Talks progresses this mission further – giving our materials an aspirational and motivational edge that you won’t find elsewhere.

For English that truly develops skills for the 21st century you need to look no further than National Geographic Learning.
National Geographic Learning helps you to bring the power of ideas into your classroom with our learning materials with TED Talks.

Within carefully-developed curricula that include real-world stories, video, and photographs from National Geographic, the inspiring ideas introduced in our learning materials with TED Talks motivate learners to express themselves thoughtfully and confidently in English.

Our learning materials provide:
- Carefully selected TED Talks that focus on ideas that learners of English want to talk about
- Scaffolded language lessons that help learners understand and talk about ideas in English
- Fully supported materials that make it easy to use TED Talks in any English language classroom.

Each TED Talk is supported in the Student Book and App

The authentic language presented in TED Talks is supported by a one-of-a-kind instructional design that uses images from the TED stage to teach and reinforce key language and concepts.

Why do you love Our World?

“Our World is a well-structured and thought-provoking series. It lets students ‘travel’ and learn about the world they live in and doesn’t only limit the lessons to learning the language. It gives them a purpose to learn the language as it shows what an amazing adventure of learning about new cultures, holidays, people and the whole beauty of this world is waiting for them.”

Marzena Peplowska, CLIL Teachers’ International Collaboration Project, Poland

“Our World is rich in terms of its themes and content. It allows the teacher and the students to discuss a variety of topics in an interactive way. Students get the chance to practice their listening, speaking, writing and reading skills thoroughly throughout each unit of the book.”

Local fishermen of Inle Lake (in Myanmar) are known for this distinctive rowing style which involves standing at the stern on one leg and wrapping the other leg around the oar. By using one foot to control the oar, they leave their hands free to fish using big conical nets.

At National Geographic Learning, our mission is to inspire students to learn the skills needed to be successful in their careers and educational experiences and become lifelong caretakers of the planet.

We want English language teachers to experience the excitement and joy of learning as well. That’s why we strive to help teachers achieve personal success and be better citizens of the 21st century.

With National Geographic Learning Webinars we aspire to do just that. We hope you’ll join us!

In Focus is National Geographic Learning’s blog for teachers and learners of English. At In Focus, we explore ideas and topics that relate to our core values of English language teaching:

- developing global citizens
- preparing students to be 21st Century learners
- motivating learners through engaging content and materials
- teaching effective English

Our posts feature authors, teacher trainers, National Geographic Explorers, and speakers from the TED stage, and focus on practical tips, interesting topics, and new ideas to help you bring the world to your English language learning classroom.

At National Geographic Learning, we believe in the power of real-world content, amazing photography, stunning video, and inspiring people to motivate students and bring your classroom to life.
Through accessible examples from their own experiences in the classroom, Paul Dummett and John Hughes provide English language teachers with practical ways to incorporate critical thinking into every class. Dummett and Hughes define critical thinking for English language teaching and demonstrate how challenging learners at all levels to think both critically and creatively develops learner autonomy, increases learner motivation, and promotes authentic communication.

“I believe this text, with its effective (and appropriate) balance of theory and practice, could be incorporated into teacher-training programs for both undergraduate and graduate students... (it) should be an essential read for ESL/EFL materials and textbook designers.”
- Sharon Cavusgil, Senior Lecturer, Department of Applied Linguistics & ESL, Georgia State University
